

1 March 2019

Greetings!

The water is getting warmer! Thanks to a trailer getting hung up on the edge of a boat ramp in mid-February, I managed to spend some quality time in Santa Rosa Sound. While the water was certainly not warm, it didn't take my breath away either. I think that it will be warmed up all the way to the level of "refreshing" by the time we get to the Tripossibilities Thursday Morning swims starting April 4th and our planned Navarre reef swim on April 14th. March should be busy and you should see many fellow TGC folks at events like the TGC Spring Social, weekly ParkRun trail series, The McGuire's 5k, Bayou Hills, and the Blackwater 10-mile Trail run! Don't forget that we have a great list of local events on the TGC calendar.

Of course we also have TGC Youth Event - the Zarzaur Law Maritime DeLuna Duathlon! There is nothing more entertaining and inspiring than watching these young athletes race, so if you can make it out, please do! More information on this race and two other events later this year at <http://www.tgcyouthmultisport.org/>.

As you prepare for your planned events this year, don't forget that all of them are "volunteer powered." So if you can, try to pick a few events that you won't be racing to come out and support the events. Later this month, you'll be getting an email asking you to volunteer at Mere Mortals over the summer. It takes a crew of 10-12 volunteers (plus 5-10 on the water safety team) to successfully run a single weekend of Mere Mortals, so it really helps us out when members sign up for a few weekends here and there as volunteers.

Spring is on its way! Get out there and enjoy it!

Cheers!
Tom Henderson
TGC President

Take Chances - Do Something EPIC

If you know anything about the history of long distance triathlon, you know that it is considered to have been 'born' in Hawaii 1979 when a small group of people got together, did some crazy distances, and achieved bragging rights for life. Something magical happened on that beach that holds strong decades later. As a race director, this is the dream - an event that captures imaginations and inspires individuals to do something out of their comfort zone. For some it's a super-sprint triathlon that creates a feeling of doubt, excitement, and determination. For others it's a 100 mile ultra run. It can literally be anything in between or beyond. As you write your own athletic biopic, you should continue to take chances and push yourself out of your comfort zone because that is when the EPIC happens.

JOE RELAXO CHALLENGE

The Inaugural Joe Relaxo Challenge was out of MY comfort zone. As a race organizer, this type of event is something I'd never seen before. Logistics were different. Goals were different. Schedules were different. That same feeling you get in the pit of your stomach as you approach a start line was permanently housed in my gut from the time we announced the event to the celebratory beverage after clean-up.

For those who may not know, the Joe Relaxo Challenge is a 24 hour/48 mile event in which participants run a 1 mile course, every 30 minutes, for 24 hours, totaling 48 miles. It's mileage and sleep deprivation. We had individuals and 2-man teams that kept pushing, encouraging, and persevering during the challenge. There were athletes of all abilities, ruckers (athletes doing this with weighted packs), families, friends, food, tents, heaters... it was a true festival of inspiration. Where I was out of my comfort zone, many of these participants were exponentially out of theirs.

It's hard to tell you're doing that EPIC thing in the moment, but I could see it in our crew and the athletes. The dauntingness of the challenge in the beginning changes to hope toward the middle and transitions again into determination toward the end.

If you looked hard you could see it. Strangers bonded through the night and encouraged through the day. I'm sure of few things, but one of those is that these athletes will talk about this event fondly for years to come, as they should. We all did something EPIC and those are the stories worth telling.

Benefits of and Tips for "Race Weight"

Most of us know that body weight affects running performance. The lighter you are, the less weight you have to lift off the ground with each stride and the more economically you can run. It's no accident that the men's marathon world record holder weighs: 113 pounds.

Many studies have been done that also prove that for every one pound of extra weight a runner carries, the knee feels an extra four pounds of pressure per stride... repeated strides can apply undue pressure on your knees and shorten the flexibility and usefulness of them.

Stay Strong!

These are the little things I do to try to stabilize my weight:

1. I take a cold shower every morning and every evening (it's OK to "ease yourself in" with warm water)...
2. I eat the same thing for breakfast (smoothie) and lunch (salad) every day because it makes it far, far easier for me to "keep track" of calories I'm consuming...
3. After every meal I do "something" for 5 minutes: jumping jacks, air squats, walking outside, you name it. This helps to reduce blood glucose...
4. For any meal, I eat all proteins and any fats BEFORE the carbs, which has been shown to reduce the amount of actual carbs you eat...
5. After dinner every night, I look at the clock, and then I don't eat again until 12 hours have passed. Period. So if I eat a midnight snack, I don't eat again until noon. That's called "intermittent fasting."
